

..Patter And Chatter..

By S. E. KISER.

NOTHING ELSE MATTERS.

YOU pause to say that all is wrong,
That proud men still oppress the weak;
You say the way is rough and long,
Your tone is doubtful when you speak;
The nations cling to jealousies,
And cause for grieving still is found;
But why come seeking to destroy
The gladness that is mine? My boy
Is home again, and safe and sound!

WE hear of armies clashing still,
And there is rivalry, and hate;
The greedy rob, the careless kill,
And rogues invade our halls of state;
The tailor's burdens grow and grow
In spite of all his threats or pleas,
But linger not to tell me so;
Why plague me with your tales of woe?
My boy is home from overseas!

THE market may not go your way,
The lover's fondest hopes may die;
The wilful still may go astray,
And cheaters cheat and liars lie;
Our chieftain's plans may go amiss,
The mobs may grumble or rebel;
But I care not what is to be:
My soldier has come home to me,
And he is whole, and all is well!

BY THE WAY, WHO IS HE?
The vice president of Germany, if there is one, is attracting about the same amount of attention that the vice president of the United States is able to command.

BUT WON'T WE BE FLYING THERE?
Henry Ford certainly is a child of fortune. By the time he gets his new cheap car on the market it is likely to be possible again to buy a set of tires without mortgaging the old home.

WE HAD EXPECTED HIM THERE.
"Doc" Cook, who claimed that he was the first man to reach the North Pole, is in Texas trying to discover oil, but even if he succeeds he will have trouble in making some people believe it is true.
